Andrew,

I ended up making it over to Webster City yesterday. I was able to get pretty close to the spot where the caller said he was when he stirred up the bottom of the river. I did not see any oil or sheen when I stirred up the bottom and to get any farther out a boat would be needed.

Andrew,

I was on vacation all last week and we did not have anyone go down towards Webster City to check out the Electrolux site. Just wanted to let you know.

Thanks Robert. Keep me in the loop regarding your plan for getting back there. If your office can't make it, maybe myself or someone from DSM could make it up to check it out.

This is the picture and text that Zach Johnson sent me. The culvert is straight out from the north side of the City Pond that is covered in duckweed. Zachs Johnson's phone number is (515) 835-1503. You can see the culvert a little better on the GIS maps that Hamilton County has.

Andrew,

This is a site that Matt Culp had been managing. An EC was recorded in early 2021. Field Office #2 received a complaint about it recently, investigated, but was unable to independently verify any issues with the site. I've reassigned this site to you. If we can independently verify that there are issues with the site that need to be addressed, we have the ability to do that under the terms of the EC.

Robert,

This sign has been reassigned to Andrew. While you can certainly involve me going forward, feel free to work directly with Andrew if you get any more complaints about the site or you observe any issues yourself while in Webster City in the future.

Thanks everyone!

Mike

Mike,

I received a call last week about an oily residue seeping out of the ponds north bank at the old Electrolux site off White Fox Rd in Webster City. The contaminated sites ID number for this facility is 492. We had someone from our office check it out last Friday but he did not see any oily residue coming out of the north bank. Are there any concerns you may have with this site or anything that needs to be looked at further?

No pictures were received from the caller.
